Dear Friends

Rosalynn and I congratulate the United States-China Policy Foundation on its 22nd anniversary. We send our warmest wishes to you and your guests.

The U.S.-China relationship is crucial to peace and prosperity. With growing tensions in the region, your work to advance mutual understanding and cooperation through people-to-people diplomacy, education, engagement, cultural exchanges, and business dialogue is more important than ever.

We wish you continued success in the coming years.

Letters of Greeting

AMBASSADOR

The United States-China Policy Foundation
316 Pennsylvania Avenue, Suite 202
Washington, D.C. 20003

Dear Friends:

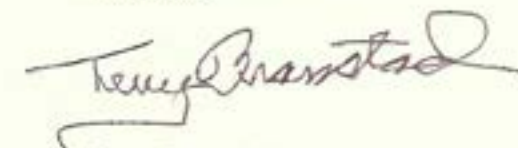

From all of us at the United States Diplomatic Mission in China, congratulations to the U.S.-China Policy Foundation on its 22nd anniversary. I am honored to serve as the U.S. Ambassador to China, a position held by such illustrious and esteemed statesmen as this year's gala co-chairs Ambassador J. Stapleton Roy and Ambassador James Sasser, and this year's honoree Ambassador Max Baucus. I appreciate all of the hard work they put into this role, and I look forward to continuing this important mission. I also send my warmest wishes to all of the guests and members of your organization attending the Anniversary Gala on November 15.

The bilateral relationship between the United States and China is undoubtedly one of the most important relationships in the world, and we appreciate all of the work your foundation does to strengthen this relationship with engagement, education, and cultural diplomacy. As I write this, we are looking forward to welcoming President Trump to Beijing for his first state visit to China in just a few days. The President's discussions with the Chinese leadership on bilateral issues will set the stage for how we work together to manage our differences and confront shared challenges like nuclear proliferation on the Korean Peninsula.

I know firsthand the importance of people-to-people diplomacy and its power to shrink the world and to narrow the differences between countries. The partnership we helped develop back in the 1980s through Iowa's Sister-State program with Hebei Province continues to bear fruit for our bilateral relationship. These kinds of ties, which advance U.S.-China mutual understanding and cooperation, are a hallmark of your foundation's work, and I commend you for forging new ties among the citizens of our two great nations.

I wish you all the best of luck as you celebrate your 22nd anniversary. Congratulations and keep up the good work!

Sincerely,

Terry Branstad

The U.S.-China Policy Foundation congratulates President Xi Jinping on a successful 19th Party Congress and applauds Presidents Donald Trump and Xi Jinping on their significant bilateral discussion.

Frequent high-level and people-to-people engagement is essential for a better U.S.-China relationship. With greater trust, understanding, and personal ties, the U.S. and China can move forward together to create a better future.

Hong Kong Economic and Trade Office Washington, DC

Hong Kong has been a Special Administrative Region of the People's Republic of China since July 1, 1997.

Under the "One Country, Two Systems" arrangement, Hong Kong enjoys a high degree of autonomy in economic, trade, financial and monetary matters. Under its constitutional document, the Basic Law, Hong Kong retains the English common law system; an independent judiciary; the free and unfettered movement of information, goods, people and capital; and a range of cherished civil liberties such as freedom of speech, freedom of religion, freedom of the press, and freedom of assembly.

Hong Kong enjoys separate membership status in international organizations such as the World Trade Organization, of which it was a founding member, and the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation.

With a population of just over seven million, Hong Kong is the world's seventh largest merchandise trading entity with goods and services trade equivalent to more than four times its GDP. According to a UN report, Hong Kong was the world's fourth-largest recipient of foreign direct investment in 2016 with FDI inflows amounting to US$108 billion.

Hong Kong is firmly committed to free trade and open markets. The Heritage Foundation, the Cato Institute and the Fraser Institute of Canada have continuously ranked Hong Kong the world's freest economy for over 20 years.

Hong Kong maintains strong trade and commercial ties with both the Mainland of China and the U.S., respectively its largest and second largest trading partners.

The U.S. is Hong Kong's second largest trading partner after the Mainland of China. Hong Kong is the U.S.'s ninth largest export market. In 2016 Hong Kong bought more than $35 billion in American goods. Hong Kong was the U.S.'s fifth largest market for beef and its sixth largest market by value for agricultural products.

With nearly 1,400 firms, the U.S. maintains one of the largest overseas commercial presences in Hong Kong. Not surprisingly, the American Chamber of Commerce in Hong Kong is the largest international chamber in the city. U.S. nationals represent one of the most significant foreign presences in the city with nearly 85,000 people calling Hong Kong home.

Aside from the strong commercial ties, Hong Kong and the U.S. are close partners in international law enforcement working together to combat terrorism, money laundering and other cross-border crimes.

The mission of the Hong Kong Economic and Trade Office in Washington, DC is to strengthen Hong Kong's economic, business, and cultural ties with the U.S. As Hong Kong Commissioner to the United States, Clement C.M. Leung is the Hong Kong government's most senior representative in the U.S. He also oversees the Hong Kong Economic and Trade Offices in New York and San Francisco.
