The founding members of USCPF in 1997.

The U.S.-China Policy Foundation was founded by Ambassadors John Holdridge, Arthur Hummel Jr., Charles W. Freeman Jr., and Dr. Chi Wang in 1995 to enhance the policymaking dialogue between the U.S. and China as well as further the understanding of China in the United States. All four founders have made enormous contributions to the establishment and growth of U.S.-China relations.

USCPF has worked for 20 years to improve mutual understanding and facilitate meaningful dialogue and exchange between the people of China and the United States.
The Foundation’s President, Dr. Chi Wang, has played a leading role in fostering improved economic, cultural, and political relations between the United States and China for more than 40 years. He has met frequently with noted Chinese and American leaders and officials over this period, and today the Foundation maintains strong ties with key figures in the U.S. and Chinese government, academic, and business communities. In 1992, he worked to help China achieve “Most Favored Nation” trade status. Dr. Wang worked in the Library of Congress Chinese and Korean Section for 47 years, and was the first Chinese American sent to China by the Library of Congress, State Department, and White House to participate in an official U.S.-China book and cultural exchange during the early years of the normalization of the Sino-U.S. relationship.

Ambassador John Holdridge traveled to China alongside then National Security Advisor Henry Kissinger as part of the secret trip in 1971 and assisted in drafting the Shanghai Communiqué in 1972. The Communiqué helped pave the way to establishing a diplomatic relationship with China in 1979. Ambassador Holdridge also served as U.S. Ambassador to Singapore and Indonesia, as well as Assistant Secretary for East Asia.

Ambassador Arthur Hummel Jr. was born and grew up in China. A child of Christian missionaries, he developed a deep knowledge of China and a passion for the country that led him to serve as the second U.S. Ambassador to China in 1981-1985. He also contributed to the aforementioned Shanghai Communiqué in 1972.

Ambassador Chas W. Freeman Jr. served as a the principal interpreter on President Nixon’s first trip to China in 1972. He later served as the Director of the China Desk and the U.S. Ambassador to Saudi Arabia from 1989-1992, as well as the Assistant Secretary for Defense for International Security.

All four founders were pioneers in developing U.S. China policy during the establishment of formal Sino-U.S. relations.
